

O. Book 30 pg. 465

Treasury Department,

BUREAU OF THE MINT,

Washington, D. C., September 8, 1886.

Sir:

In reply to yours of the 7th inst with reference to the appointment of ten more men in view of the increased work put upon the mint especially incidental to the issue and cleaning of minor coins, I have to say that the latter work is not permanent, and it is understood that it shall be done not faster than the existing provisions of the mint admit, especially as this work is done at a loss, which is likewise the case with the recoinage of the silver dimes.

In view of the fact that I yesterday authorized, upon your recommendation, a double shift, I have to suggest

(2 Sep. O.B. 30. pg. 465)

that before any ^{further} additions to the payroll are made, you get into operation that change, and see what if any, may be the requirements afterwards. But I will confer with you more fully on the subject when I see you, which I am inclined to think will be on Saturday.

Very respectfully,

Jas. A. Kimbale
Director.

Hon. Daniel M. Fox,
Supt. U. S. Mint,
Philadelphia.

Treasury Department,
Bureau of the Mint,
Washington, D.C.,
September 8, 1886

Sir:

In reply to yours of the 7th inst. with reference to the appointment of ten more men in view of the increased work put upon the Mint especially incidental to the issue and cleaning of minor coins, I have to say that the latter work is not permanent, and it is understood that it shall be done not faster than the existing provisions of the Mint admit, especially as this work is done at a loss, which is likewise the case with the recoinage of the silver dimes. In view of the fact that I yesterday authorized, upon your recommendation, a double shift. I have to suggest that before any further additions to the payroll are made, you get into operation that change, and see what if any, may be the requirements afterwards. But I will confer with you more fully on the subject when I see you, which I am inclined to think will be on Saturday.

Very respectfully,
Jas. P. Kimball
Director.

Hon. Daniel M. Fox,
Supt. U.S. Mint,
Philadelphia.

[Noted in margins:]

O. Book 30 pg. 465

(2 Sep. 0.13.30 pg. 465)